

Do not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law. I finally have back my evenings, especially my dinner hour with my wife, rather than responding to some telephone marketer wanting to sell something to me that I neither needed nor wanted. Whereas in the past I received 15 to 20 calls per week, at a minimum, now I seldom receive any calls. Businesses have a right to do business, but I have a right to privacy. My right to privacy supercedes a telemarketer's right to bombard me with phone calls.
